Mrs. Harrison's Reception Yesterday-Wed-

Mrs. Harrison's reception to the Woman's Council made the White House quite gay for an hour or so yesterday afternoon. The reception was heid in the east room and began a few minutes after 5. Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. McKee, Mrs. Russell Harrison and Mrs. Dimmick stood near the corridor door and the introductions were made to them by Miss Frances Willard. Bad as the weather was, and it has not been worse for any festive occasion at the White House this winter, it did not seem to lessen the ranks of the visitors nor keep them from coming in their best array. The characteristic costumes of some only brought out the elegance of many others. Mrs. Harrison had on a most becomingly quiet dress of black brocaded satin combined with mauve satin. Mrs. McKee wore a pink and white striped India silk. Mrs. Rus-Mrs. Harrison's reception to the Woman's combined with manve satin. Mrs. McKee wore a pink and white striped India silk. Mrs. Rus-sell Harrison had on gray crepon with silver braid trimmings studded with turquoise, and Mrs. Dimmick wore a black striped satin. All the parlors ware lighted Mrs. Dimmick wore a black striped satin. All the parlors were lighted, as were also the conservatories, and the ladies took advantage, many of them being strangers, to thoroughly look it all over. Two diversions from the set program were occasioned by first the frolicsome entree of Baby McKee and then by little sister Mary, who looked very pretty in her white mull dress and pink ribbon shoulder knots. They got their fill of motherly caresses and petting from the ladies. Some of shoulder knots. They got their hit of motherly caresses and petting from the ladies. Some of the latter, who have been holding big audiences spellbound ail week, formed a cordon around little Ben while he, mounted on a chair, and the way of the way of the way of the state of the way of gave them a thrilling recitation in the way of a nursery rhyme. While fondly applauded, no amount of persuasion would cause the little fellow to give them an encore. The presence of the babies made the touch of nature that surely makes all the woman's world kin and the setting of recing the young tark who have been made such a prominent feature in the news-papers for the last two years, was a pleasure to every woman in the gathering. After all had been introduced Mrs. Harrison enjoyed chat-ting with different members of the party, as did the other ladies of the receiving party, all of whom save Mrs. Dimmick had been present at one or other of the council meetings and were glad to meet face to face those who interested Quite a company of ladies met yesterday afternoon at Mrs. Walter Wood's to hear Miss Amy Hare give selections from Chopin. Among them were Mrs. J. Thompson Swann, Mrs. Neill, Mrs. Seth M. Ackiey, Miss Shorrill, Mrs. Carey, Miss Samt and Wanamaker. The next meeting will be on Thursday, March 5th, at Mrs. Wanamaker's.

Mrs. Ellen B. Deitrick of Massachusetts read a paper on the "Congressional Debate on the Admission of Wyoming," which began with a ented artists. Next Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock is the time appointed for the entertainsharp criticism of those whose "Chivalry will not permit women to be dragged down from her lofty pinnacle of womanhood and mother-"In studying the debate on Wyoming's ad mission it is evident that many of our legis-lators stand greatly in need of enlightenment. The Former Leader of the Seven Traveler lators stand greatly in need of enlightenment. They do not even know what woman's position has been in past centuries. The present exaltation of man is but the reaction from the former superior condition of woman, the swinging back of the family. Formerly the father had no right to the children that the mother was bound to respect, and woman occupied the position of supremacy in the family, in society and in the state. There has never been a time when there was not in some part of the earth a place where women were supreme and filled all the positions occupied usually by men. But the most complete evidence of woman's ability to reign successfully has come from the heart of Africa, where in the kingdom of Lunda not a single matter of importance to the state is undertaken without the advice of a woman who is herself above all law. Still, a powerful oligarchy John Wallace is a young colored man whose appearance is a good index to his character. Three or four years ago he was the leader of a gang of desperate young thieves who called themselves the "Seven Travelers;" but the gang was broken up after they had robbed several cars on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, both in this city and in West Virginia. Wallace was in the Police Court today for 'shooting crap," carrying a pistol and stealing an overcoat from an old colored man named David Coleman Stotts. He stole the coat from where Stotts was at work, near the government herself above all law. Still, a powerful oligarchy of women is no better than a similar form of gov-Two days ago Stotts saw Wallace on the street wearing his coat, and he pursued him to regain his property, but Wallace drew a revolver, which frightened the old man, and the thief ran into Jackson's alley and disappeared in a ernment by men. Not men over women nor women over men is what is wanted, but both working together for the greatest good of all. This is what we see in Wyoming."

Yesterday morning Policemen McCormick and Fenton arrested him and locked him up. MRS. JOSEPHINE K. HENRY. Mrs. Josephine K. Henry of Kentucky, who The prisoner told several stories when questioned by Judge Miller, but was unable to tell anything that was beneficial to himself.

Lawyer Peyton, for the prisoner, made no defense to the charge of carrying the pistol, but he claimed that the information for larceny had been made out wrong as the prevention. recently ran for the office of clerk of the court of appeals and was defeated, gave a clear account of the Kentucky constitutional convention and the efforts that are being made in the blue-grass state to have women recognized legally as human beings. The old constitution under which Kentucky has been struggling along has within it not a hint that a woman ever put her foot upon the soil of the state. When Mrs. Henry ran for office her husband and twenty-one-year-old son went out of the had been made out wrong, as the property was laid in the name of David C. Stotts and it should have been Coleman Stotts.

Judge Miller said he supposed that it had been laid in the name by which Stotts is best when Mrs. Henry ran for omce her husband and twenty-one-year-old son went out of the house and voted for her and she told her hearers this morning that she was prouder of those votes than she was of all the rest of the votes she got in the state. Women do not ask for more than is given to men. They want no special class legislation. All they want is the same that the men have. known.
Stotts was called up and asked what his wife called him.
"Papa," was his response, and the old man laughed heartily as he thought of his better half's endearing name for him.
Judge Miller then took a hand in the proceedings and gave Wallace all he could under the law. All they want is the same that the men have, and if they get that they are not afraid that they will not get justice. Women have asked for equal property rights, and if the wire pull-ers would only let the elections alone she felt sure that equal property rights would be granted. Women in Kentucky are in a worse condition than the women of any other state, but they are beginning to arise and put on the panoply of faith and heroism to fight the noble battle for their just deserts. Equal rights for all and special privileges for none is what she wants

Still, in a state constitutional conamendment to the post office appropriation bill the bill that has already passed the Senate, but

That this coalition was formed under the sanction of the National Woman's Suffrage Association, convened at Washington, which is the highest authority of the woman suffrage party in this country.

That it was formed with the distinct understanding that the parties whose aid it sought were "socialists and anarchists."

That the means used for carrying out this purpose have been diligently prosecuted, and the result so far as attained affords a lively satisfaction to the chairman of that committee.

The direct and legitimate outcome of the madness of the French revolution was state socialism, and these doctrines of the equal sexual and political freedom of men and women are today held by the great mass of socialists and communists in Europe and America.

What Senator Allison, who is chairman of the appropriation committee, wanted to know was how many clerks now in the census office would come within the provisions of this amendment, and other facts.

ROW MANY WOULD BE AFFECTED. Mr. Porter states that the amendment would "make eligible for the classified departments of 'make eligible for the classified departments of the government 1,640 employes (stenographers, chiefs of divisions, clerks, copyists and computers) of the census office, that is, presuming all these persons had served one year in the census office. "Of this probable number there are eightythree persons who received their appointments because of efficient service in the tenth census. As a rule these clerks rank among the very best, many of them having resigned their places in the classified service to give the census office the benefit of their experience in the tenth census. Manifestly it would be un-just not to put these clerks, after years of faith-ful service, on a footing with those who have simply passed a civil service examination. STATE APPORTIONMENTS.

"The appointments to the census office have been apportioned as far as possible among states and have not been made from one political party. A CONCOCTION OF LIES.

Miss Anthony, when she was shown this pamphlet by a Star reporter this morning, said that there was not a single interference of the truth in it all that there was not a single interference or an overwhelming majority of the uniterior a rule was adopted making only those applicants eligible for appointmen in the census office who had passed the clerkship civil service examination, and the clerks thus appointed have been worthy fact that all changes in the rules and regulations, approved August 3, 1889, by the honorable Secretary of the Interior a rule was adopted making only those applicants eligible for appointmen in the census office who had passed the clerkship civil service examination, and the clerks thus appointed have been as a rule, very satisfactory. It is also a noteworthy fact that all changes in the rules and regulations, approved August 3, 1889, by the honorable Secretary of the Interior a rule was adopted making only those applicants eligible for appointmen in the census office who had passed the clerks thus appointed have been as a rule, very satisfactory. It is also a noteworthy fact that all changes in the rules and regulations, approved August 3, 1889, by the honorable Secretary of the Interior a rule with a view to tightening, rather than loosen-ing, the tests required of applicants for em-ployment in the census office.

With an amendment limiting the appor-tionment in accordance with the population of 1890, the bill, in my opinion, is wise and just. It simply gives an opportunity for further em-ployment by the government to, at the outside, a thousand cierks; over half, perhaps two-thirds, of whom are now or will be on the eligible list. Many of these cierks will have worked faithfully for two and these very for the consequents. Many of these cierks will have worked faithfully for two and three years for the government, and will come to their duties thoroughly trained and equipped. To reward them after such service by discharge is not under the circumstances just or right. The capacity and faithfulness of these cierks cannot be questioned, as it is on record in the department of which the company office is a bureau.

president downward, no doubt breathed a sigh of relief as the Downger Empress Frederick of Germany steamed away from the capital at 10 this morning. The attitude assumed during this morning. The attitude assumed during her sojourn here by the Patriotic League on the one hand and the crary utterances of the Cologne Gazette on the other would, it was feared, result in a popular demonstration that both Germany and France would ultimately regret. Fortunately the imperial guest was enabled to conclude her visit without any demonstration and at 9.45 left the German embassy in a landau, accompanied by her daughter. Bentin, Feb. 27.—The sudden change of feel-

Those who doubted the wisdem of the course adopted by the empressin prolonging her visit beyond the time first fixed for her departure are naturally not sarprised, although they hope that it will still be couled without any management of the course of th ended without any unpleasant incident. The German papers comment on the attitude of the Parisian press and people in terms of regret, but the tone of the articles is moderate.

Gravity of the Situation.
Parts, Feb. 27.—The gravity of the situation in Paris can be judged from the fact that, actin Paris can be judged from the fact that, acting under advice from high quarters, the empress changed the line of her route for fear of being insulted by that portion of the populace which had gradually worked itself into a fever heat of rage over the presence of the impersal visitor in Paris. It was publicly announced yesterday evening and again this morning that the Empress Frederick intended to leave this city for Calais at 11:30 a.m., but upon the suggestions referred to she left the German embassy two hours earlier and, entering a carriage, was driven rapidly to the Gare du Nord. riage, was driven rapidly to the Gare du Nord, where she entered the train which left that depot for boulogne. BITTER PEELINGS IN BERLIN. According to a Berlin dispatch, the treatment of the Empress Frederick in Paris is arousing a very bitter feeling in the court circles, and the animosity displayed toward France is deeper than it has been in many years. This is exactly what was predicted in France as likely to happen when the kaiser permitted an intimation to go out of his own intention to visit Paris. It was then stated by well-informed Prench authority that a German imperial visit would do more to have at city, and it might be dangerous for the govern-ment to offer even the semblance of an apology
